have nothing to depend upon but their own recollection."
The one fact that seemed to throw light on the subject was the apparent admission by both sides that the name, "Howard C Wiggins," appeared on some paster ballots that were used in the district in question. It was clear, almost from the start, that Justice Kennedy feit that the returns ought to be sent back to the inspectors, and that to let them remain as they were would be to thwart the will of the people as expressed at the polls. His only difficulty was how to solve the question raised by the absence of a sample ballot from the official returns. The Gordian knot was finally cut, the Justice stopping the argument short and deciding that a peremptory writ of mandamus should issue requiring the Chamberlain to send the returns back for correction.

ALL WANT TO SEE SENATOR HILL Me Has Not Determined Yet Whether or Not He Can Go South. Senator Hill spent nearly the entire day yestarday in his rooms in the Hotel Normandia. He devoted the day to rest and to receiving his personal friends. John A. McCall spent a part of the afternoon with him, and the conversation was as far removed from politics as it is possible to imagine. The Senator told a reporter of THE SUN that there was nothing new porter of The SUN that there was nothing new in the political world and that nothing he could say would be of public interest. In reference to the invitation he has received to address the Mississippi Legislature, he said that he had not yet decided whether he would be able to accept it. The same difficulty presents itself that embarransed the Senator during his trip to Atlanta, where he was the orator at the unveiling of the Grady monument. He received at that time invitations from all parts of the South to address the people. It was possible for him to accept only a few. of these invitations because of the south to address the people. It was possible for him to accept only a few. of these invitations because of the similar time at his disposal. As soon as it became known that the legislators of Mississippi had invited him to address them invitations kept pouring in for him to extend his trip until there was scarcely a city in the South that was not hopeful of entertaining him. Telegrams urging him to address Hill clubs in Alabams and Florida were received among others, and he received also a hearty invitation to participate in the St. Patrick's Day banquet at Bavannah.

Among the letters received by the Senator was one signed "A. W. Fletcher." The letter says, in reference to the late elections of Supervisors in the State:

"The Republican papers are making a comparison of the election of Supervisors with those of 1891. I make the comparison with those of districts which Ar. Cleveland carried in in the political world and that nothing he pervisors in the State:

"The Republican papers are making a comparison of the election of Supervisors with those of 1891. I make the comparison with those districts which Mr. Cleveland carried in 1898. This being a Presidential year and the Supervisors of more spolitical account, both parties did their best, as did both parties in 1898."

The letter contained a comparative table of the elections of 1893 and 1892 in forty counties. It shows a net gain of seventy-six for the Democracy in the recent elections over those of 1893, Senator Hill will leave for Washington this morning.

ACCUSED OF SHOPLIFTING.

Mre Mar . Rheinhardt Arrested, but Dis-At 9 o'clock on Saturday night a respectable.

looking middle-aged woman was arrested and taken to the Stagg street station, Williamsburgh, at the instance of Simon Smith, who said he had detected her in the act of shop-lifting at his store, 709 Broadway, Brooklyn. She gave her name as Mrs. Mary Reinhardt, and said she lived at 91 Tompkins avenue Her appearance was so much in her favor that the Sergeart asked Smith to reconsider his charge, but he insisted that he had detected the prisoner in the act of stealing some lace off a counter. Ine court yesterday morning Smith refused to appear against the prisoner, and Justice Gotting dismissed the case.

A reporter called yesterday afternoon at 91 Tompkins avenue and asked for Mra. Mary Rheinhardt. He was presented to a middle-aged woman who said she was the person named, and to her husband, who was somewhat older. They both indignantly denied that, as far as they were concerned, any such thing had taken place. Mrs. Rheinhard, as she spells her name, said that she left Brooklyn shortly after 5 o'clock on Saturday evening, and, after spending the night in Jersey City with her sister, had returned to her home in Williamsburgh early yesterday morning. Mr. Sheinhard eorroborated this statement. He said he had seen her off on the ferryboat on Saturday evening, and when he heard the report yesterday morning of the alleged shop-lifting he started at once for Jersey City, and found that his wife had been there all night. Her appearance was so much in her favor that Corroran Would Have Let the Train Rus Over Him Rather Than Pay His Fare. Chrystie Corcoran, a truck driver, 24 years old, entered the Eighth street and Sixth avenue elevated railway station on the up-town side at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. He was very drunk and refused to drop his ticket in the box. The gateman tried to drag him into the office, aided by the ticket seiler, and as the three were struggling Policeman Finn came into the station. Corregan broke away and imped down on the tracks. The officer and the two station men jumped after him, and a lively struggle on the tracks began, watched with interest by spectators on the platforms. Corcoran, who is a large man, had thrown himself across the up-town track, and clung to the ties so tenaciously that the officer and the two station men could not move him. The struggle was at its height when the headlight of an up-town train appeared coming around the corner of West Third street. A station man on the down-town side ran up the track and signalled the train. The locomotive stopped a few rods from the men struggling on the track. More trainmen came, and at length Corcoran was dragged from the station and locked up.

At Jefferson Market Court yesterday Justice nue elevated railway station on the up-town and locked up.

At Jefferson Market Court yesterday Justice

THE VANDERBILT MILLIONS. The week in Wall street has been marked by an unusual abundance of rumors of impend-ing permutations and combinations of railroad properties, none of which have yet been confirmed, and some, if not all of which are more likely to prove false than true. That of the assumption by the Vanderbilt family of the practical ownership of the New York and New England Railroad is so improbable that it never should have received the credit it did. The interests of the Vanderbilts in the New York Central Railroad and its connections are too closely allied with those of the Boston and Albany Railroad to permit them for a moment to entertain the idea of lending as elstance to a line which would divert freight and travel between Boston and New York away from the Poston and Springfield section of the Boston and Albany road. Were such an act of hostility committee by the Vanderbilts it is in the power of the Boston and Albany Company not only to re-taliate upon the New York Central, but also to parallel from Springfield to New York the New York and New Haven Railroad, in which the Vanderbilts are large shareholders. The story of the acquisition by the New York Central of a lease of the Delaware and Hudson properties is more plausible, but no facts have yet been made public which give it support. The Delaware and Hudson Company is ready sufficiently dependent upon the Central for a connection with this city of its Saratoga and Montreal lines to insure its friendly management, and a lease of its properties would be superfluous. This same con sideration also renders improbable the rumors that both the Eric and the Pennsylvania railroad companies are about to make a closer alliance with the Delaware and Hudson. Those relating to the supposed participation of the Vanderbilts in the recent coal combination have an equal air of romance. At all events, they are contrary to the tacit agreement which was entered into, not long ago, between the New York Central and the Pennsylvania railroad companies that neither should make war upon the other. The immediate result of that compact was to relieve the Vanderbilts of the costly and unprofitable South Pennsylvania Railroad enterprise, and to transfer the burden to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. and it would be bad faith in the Vanderbilts now to ally themselves with the fees of the Pennsylvania, as they would do by entering the coal combination. The rise in Lake Shore stock was accompanied by no definite statement of reasons for it, and it seems to have been effected by nothing but bold and resolute buying. A scrip dividend to represent surplus earnings was hinted at, but no authority for it was mentioned. Still there is no doubt that Lake Shore is intrinsically worth more than the 120 or thereabouts at which it has lately been selling. It has really earned for the last two years nearly 10 per cent. upon its $50,000,000 capital, and I am inclined to believe it will ultimately have to divide in cash something approaching that amount, though the time for doing it has not yet arrived, and those who have bought the stock at 140 will have to wait a long while for any great profit on it.

of affecting the stock market is not in the least hindered by the lack of real material for them. The maxim that a lie well stuck to is as good as the truth finds exemplification owhere so thoroughly and so often as on the Stock Exchange. The late lamented Phineas T. Barnum was once unfortunate enough to encounter an innocent whom he had victimized with the woolly horse, the Feeier mermaid. Joyce Heth, or some similar manuactured wonder, just after the victim had discovered the fraud practised upon him and was nighly incensed thereat. To his reproaches and objurgations, winding up with the emphatic declaration that for the future he would never again pay Barnum a quarter of a dollar for admission to any of his shows, the crafty deceiver serenely replied: "If I can get only one single quarter from each of the fools that pass by the entrance to my Museum I shall make all the money I want." The speculative brokers of the Stock Exchange do much better than Barnum did. Their victims pay a good deal more than a quarter for each of their experiences, and they do it not once but frequently, undeterred by the repeated exposures of the frauds of which they have been made the victims. If the printed lists of stock sales for the last fortnight accurately represent the transactions of the outside public. the commissions received by the brokers have been something enormous. I suspect, however, that 90 per cent, of the business has been between confederates who, like the cappers round a mock auctioneer, make a tremendous show of buying in order to entice unwary passers by, so that the sum really extracted from amateurs' pockets is nothing like so large as it appears to be.

It is quite evident that the concection and the dissemination of reports for the purpose

What is to me specially noteworthy in last week's crop of rumors is that, whether the names of the Vanderblits have been employed in them with or without justification in fact they have been employed for the enhancement of the values of the properties which they are said to have acquired and not for their depreciation. Other men, equally conspicuous in Wall street, are made to play exactly the opposite part in the fictions devised for the pro-motion of speculation. When it is desired to induce the public to sell any stock one of these men is reported to have gained control of it and a panic in it at once ensues. Ruin has so often followed such control when really ob tained that the mere mention of it frightens people. The administration of the Vander-bilts, on the contrary, has been so frequently marked by a real improvement in values that the public has come to have faith in them, and to be not only will-ing but auxious to follow where they lead the way. This may be only luck, but it is the fact, and that suffices to inspire confidence It is said of the Rothschilds that they always promote a lucky employee and dismiss an unucky one as soon as possible. What they want is successful results and not explanations of failure. Nations do the same with their statesmen, their generals, and their admirals They judge their servants accordingly to their deeds and not according to supposed abilities which might win in diplomacy and in war, but do not. So the Vanderbilts, from the old Commodore down, while making large fortunes for themselves, have made the fortunes of every one who has stuck by them, and the result is hat I have mentioned. The fact is that the Vanderbilts are compelled by the circumstances of their situation to be preservers and not destroyers of property values. Their grandfather, the Commodore, often turned about in his tracks, and for a time broke down the market which he had been putting up. This he did because it was necessary to his schemes of acquisition. Their father found himself the possessor of so much wealth that he did not repeat the Com-modore's operations in this respect, and sold only when he found he had made a mistake in buying, as he did in Union Pacific, or when he foresaw a fall, us he did when in 1879 he turned over at 120 his block of New York Central to Jupiter Morgan. At his 'death he left to his two sons, William K. Vanderbilt and Cornelius Vanderbilt, besides the $10,000,-000 spiece which he gave them in common with their six brothers and sisters, a residuary estate estimated at not less than $100,000,000. and which may have been more. The combined income of all this capital must be about $10,000,000 a year, which for the five years which have elapsed since the testator's death argregates $50,000,000, and has not been diminished in any sensible degree by personal expenditures. This $50,000,000 has had to be nvested, and the $10,000,000 added to it year by year will have to be invested also. Hence the family have every motive for being conservative, and for avoiding all measures which would disturb and unsettle financial peace.

The Vanderbilt militons are, therefore, properly regarded by the public as a guarantee for the security of the investments by which they Funeral private.

McGILL.—At Rondout, March 5, Patrick McGill.

40 '... Tom Jones' Pergrice Pickle.' Nonte are represented and as hostages given by their possessors for their good behavior.

PRATT, 155 6th av.

The income they yield legitimately is so vast that it takes away the tempta-tion to which men of smaller means so often yield, of going into illegitimate operations, and reduces the problem before their owners to the very simple one of securing interest and dividends. Naturally, the Vanderbilts give their attention mainly to railroads. It is the tradition of the family, just as real estate is that of the Astors and the Goelets. How much longer this field will be sufficient for them, and what they will do when they have occupied every available nook and corner of it, will be interesting to observe, but for the present they go on adding to their possessions thousands of shares of railroad stock and millions of dollars of railroad bonds, to the exclusion of everything else. That they never make mistakes, and that all their investments turn out well, it would be too much to expect; but besides their own skill and experience, they are able to command the services of the most competent advisers, and therefore seldom go amiss. It is the old story: water runs to the rivers, and to them that have is given. MATTHEW MARSHALL
